History of the Old Mill

Lexington's old cotton mill was built before the turn of the century. Sources vary, one that the mill was completed in 1891, another that it opened operations in 1893. The mill was built by the local Roof family with financial backing from G.E. Huggins, a New York business man and the new venture's first president. Huggins was elected president of the new mill, incorporated as Lexington Manufacturing Co., According to one source, in 1894 with $100,000 in capital. The mill manufactured cotton for mattresses and red cotton cloth for uniforms for the California prison system and other products.
